JJ Gormley-Etchells, E-RYT500

JJ is a Yoga Educator and Yoga Therapist and began practicing yoga in 1979. She has studied from many different traditions. Most of the yoga taught in the U.S. when JJ began learning yoga was simply called Hatha Yoga, later she discovered more detail about what “style” these teachers were teaching. Some of the styles of yoga she has studied include: Kripalu, Sivananda, Kundalini, White Lotus, Ashtanga, Iyengar, Anusara and most recently KHYF known for their therapeutic approach to teaching yoga and for linking the breath with movement.

JJ loves her diverse background and calls her yoga education “eclectic and well-rounded.” She draws from each tradition she has studied, seeing the good in all and uses what she loves and what resonates with her heart. She teaches yoga poses from the perspective of the energetic body and staying connected to the earth energetically (being well-grounded.) She’ll look at the structure of the body and what is happening with the bones at and around each of the main energy centers (chakras). She teaches how the bones move at each of these chakras to create more space at the joints so one can move with better freedom and release stuck energy.

As Director of this and her other Teacher Training Programs, JJ corresponds with and coordinates over 100 students, yet always has the time for a phone call or to return a email. Her students in the Teacher Training Program become her delight to teach as they are the students most interested in the true aspects and tools of yoga.

JJ has produced many yoga training manuals and handouts, yoga videos/DVDs, and a chanting CD which can be purchased on her website. She also continually makes chakra jewelry (selling her pieces at her workshops when she travels as well as at East Meets West.) She has compiled a Study Guide for Yoga Teacher Trainees for use with this program. Study Guides may be obtained on her website or will be sold at the first workshop in September. She is in the process of writing a book, “Yoga Therapy Through the Chakra” with Megan Sullivan and illustrations by Terry Strayer.
